THE AQUEDUCT BRIDGE.

Report of the Commissioners That Tracks Be

The Commissioners today put themselves on record as being in favor of allowing a railroad to pass over the Aqueduct bridge, provided it was not propelled by steam and used the base of the superstructure as a roadbed.

Mr. D. L. King, president of the Washington and Arlington Railroad Company, called upon the Commissioners this morning and urged them to make their report upon the bill having the occupancy of the bridge in view. He was in favor, he said, of splicing the crossbeams of the bridge and running a roadbed supported by uprights from the stone piers for the occupancy of the tracks of the company. This would mean the abandonment of the west footway, but would leave the 24-foot driveway and the east footway untouched. He stated that it was the purpose of the company to run te lightest cars and operate them across the

Commissioner Douglass, however, favored the use of the base of the superstructure for the roadbed—that is, to construct it upon the

Mr. King said his company would have no objection to doing this provided the Commis-sioners could selve the great engineering feature of crossing the canal without affecting the rights of the canal company. The top of the stone piers was not sufficiently high to allow the road to enter Georgetown without crossing the canal at a dangerous height to passing canal on the bill, as follows:

'The Commissioners have been informed that a report is requested at once upon a pro-posed amendment to Senate bill 3448, respect-ing the Washington and Arlington Railway that they favor the use of that portion of the stone piers of the Aqueduct bridge which projects outside of the base of the superstructure as it now stands. This surplus of pier is not less then eight feet, and a late communication by Mr. C. B. Hunt, civil engineer, reporting upon the construction and strength of said ridge, indicates beyond a doubt that there is sufficient strength of both bridge and piers to accommodate one railroad using a motor other than steam. Tracks constructed upon these projections would be entirely out of sight of herses passing over the bridge. They would be about twenty feet below the orface of the bridge, and the foot-full of the orses, with the rumble of the vehicles, would effectually disguise all sounds from the tracks below. It will hardly be necessary for the Commissioners to suggest that a tramway railroad connection with the opposite side of the river is of great importance to the people of both sides. They suggest that the right be given to lay tracks on both the east and west sides of the piers. The Commissioners further recommend that provision also be made for the more than the provision also be made for the use, upon proper arrangements, of said tracks by any other tramway com-pany which Congress may hereafter authorize eross said bridge."

The officers had reliable information that there were ten or twelve members of the party, but they were also satisfied that some of them had gone away. They were not satisfied, however, that these were the only ones left here, and after things had been quieted the officers went out in search of others. It was about 8:30 o'clock that Detectives Weedon and Boardman made two more arrests. These men were found in a saloon on Pennsylvania avenue, and they gave their names as James McCarthy and Wm. The Island of Zante is fifteen miles west of the Morea and ten miles south of Cephalonia. It is about twenty-three miles long and twelve miles broad, and is covered with vine-yards. The principal product is the Zante cur-rants of which from ten to twelve million pounds are exported every year. Olive oil is also produced on the island in large quantities, and there are a number of silk mills and other manufacturing interests. The name of this island is derived from the founder of the chief island is derived from the founder of the chief-city, Zacynthus, the Arcadian chieftain. The city of Zante has a population of 17,000, and is the seat of a Greek archbishop and a Roman Catholic bishop. It has five or six churches, a theater, hospitals, arsenal and a citadel. The harbor is large and the best in the group except hat of Corfu.

A Statue to James G. Blaine. A movement to erect a statue in New York o James G. Blaine has already been started. It is proposed to raise by popular subscription a fund sufficient to build a national statue, the design to be made by a sculptor selected by the subscribers themselves. Contributions are being asked for, and no doubt, if the project is pushed vigorously from the start, the money will soon be raised. No particular spot has yet been selected, but those details will be settled as soon as the money has begun to come in.

VALUABLE DOILIES. They Are Decorated With Photographs Made on Sensitized Linen. From the New York Ledger.

So many boys and girls take pictures now adays that plain, everyday photography is not as interesting as it was when pocket cameras first became known. Yet, to take a photograph well is a real accomplishment. And for those who have acquired it, many very nice gifts are within easy reach. Here is something which a New York boy did for Christmas, and which all amateur photographers may repeat for Easter or birthday presents.

This very enterprising young photographer procured a quantity of what is known as "sensitivized" or "sensitized" linen and upon this linen he took pictures of all the pretty pieces of furniture and cozy corners in his home. When the pictures were all nicely photographed upon When the linen, and you may be sure it was no quick nor easy task, the amateur photographer en-listed his sister into the work and persuaded her to stitch the pictures upon tiny napkins and doilies for his mother's table.
